BIOGRAPHY AND TURNING POINTS IN EUROPE AND AMERICA

Edited by Karla B. Hackstaff, Feiwel Kupferberg and Catherine Négroni
Contents

Notes on contributors iv

Introduction: Advancing the dialogue on turning points 1
Karla B. Hackstaff

1. Unpacking biographical narratives: investigating stories of artistic careers in Northern Jutland, Denmark
Feiwel Kupferberg

2. Turning points in the life course: a narrative concept in professional bifurcations 41
Catherine Négroni

3. Conjugal separation and immigration in the life course of immigrant single mothers in Québec 65
Ana Gherghel and Marie-Christine Saint-Jacques

4. Migration biography and ethnic identity: on the discontinuity of biographical experience and how turning points affect the ethnicisation of biography 93
Thea D. Boldt

5. Biographical structuring through a critical life event: parental loss during childhood 125
Gerhard Jost

6. Decisive turning points in life trajectories of violence among young men in the barrios of Caracas: the initiation and biographical reconversion to non-violent lifestyles 143
Verónica Zubillaga

7. The turning points of the single life course in Budapest, Hungary 167
Ágnes Sántha

8. Complicating actions and complicated lives: raising questions about narrative theory through an exploration of lesbian lives 187
Nikki Ward

9. Religious conversion as a biographical turn/ing: the case of Orthodox believers in contemporary Russia 207
Liana Ipatova

10. Conclusion: theorising turning points and decoding narratives 227
Feiwel Kupferberg

Index 261
Notes on contributors

Thea D. Boldt (PhD) is a Research Assistant at the Kulturwissenschaftliche Institut, Hessen. Her primary research interests are based on qualitative research on migration, gender, and ethnic/national identities. She is a chair of the European Sociological Association Research Network ‘Biographical Perspectives on European Societies’. Her PhD project was ‘Ethnic identities and processes of biographical reinterpretation. Case study on biographical constructions of migration on the example of Polish migrants in Germany’.

Ana Gherghel (PhD) is Researcher at the Center of Social Sciences in the University of Azores, Portugal (CES-UA) and Associated Researcher at the Center for Research on the adaptation of youth and families at risk (JEFAR), University Laval, Canada. Her research interests focus on the area of life course studies and family migration, in particular the analysis of familial transitions and trajectories in an immigration context and the impact of migration on families.

Karla B. Hackstaff (PhD) is Professor of Sociology and Director of Women’s and Gender Studies at Northern Arizona University, USA. She investigates the social constitution of intersectional identities through families and genders in the context of social inequalities. Relevant publications include: Marriage in a culture of divorce (Temple University Press, 1999); in 2009 two articles: (2009) ‘Who are we? Genealogists negotiating ethno-racial identities’, Qualitative Sociology, vol 32, no 2, pp 17-194 and (2009) “‘Turning points” for aging genealogists: claiming identities and histories in time’, Qualitative Sociology Review, April, vol V, issue 1, pp 130-51.

Liana Ipatova (PhD) is a researcher, visiting lecturer and coordinator of education programmes in the Institute of Sociology at the Russian Academy of Sciences, Moscow. Her interests include biographical and religious studies, psychoanalysis and social anthropology. The main theme of her last papers was religious conversion to Orthodoxy as a typical and unique event in social and biographical contexts. She has published the chapter: ‘Modern features of reproduction of Orthodox tradition’, in A.B. Gofman (ed) Traditions and innovations in contemporary Russia (in Russian) (Rosspen, 2008, pp 409-56).
Gerhard Jost (PhD) is Associate Professor of Sociology at the Vienna University of Economics and Business, Department of Socioeconomics, Institute for Sociology and Social Research, Austria. His scholarship includes areas of qualitative methods, biographical research, family, work and migration. Among diverse articles he has published recently are: ‘Jewish life stories and methods of narrative analysis’, in E. Lappin and A. Lichtblau (eds) The ‘truth’ of memory: Jewish life stories (Studienverlag, 2008), pp 223–34; ‘Scientific methods of social research as coaching procedures’, Organizational Consulting, Supervision, Coaching, Special Issue 2/2008, pp 32–42; and ‘Biography and life-course as categories in socioeconomic research’ in G. Mikl-Horke (ed) Socioeconomics: The return of economy into society (Metropolis-Verlag, 2011), pp 207–37.

Feiwel Kupferberg (PhD) is Professor of Education at Malmö University, Sweden. His major research interests are societal and individual transformations, narratology and media aesthetics, entrepreneurship, creative teaching and learning and the sociology of creativity (in science, art, industry and pedagogy). His latest books are Becoming a nurse (Nyt Nordisk Forlag, 1999), The break-up of communism (Macmillan/St Martin’s Press, 1999), The rise and fall of the German Democratic Republic (Transaction Books, 2002) and Creative times (Hans Reitzel, 2006).

Catherine Négroni (PhD) is Associate Professor in Sociology at Charles de Gaulle University-Lille 3, CLERSE (Centre Lillois d’Études et de Recherches Sociologiques et Économiques), France. Her research has been concerned with professional reconversions, life course studies and bifurcations, work and migrations. Her relevant publications include Reconversion professionnelle volontaire. Changer d’emploi, changer de vie: un regard sociologique sur les bifurcations (Armand Colin, 2007) and (2005) ‘La reconversion professionnelle volontaire: d’une bifurcation professionnelle à une bifurcation biographique’, Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, vol CXIX.

Marie-Christine Saint-Jacques (PhD), social worker, is Associate Professor at the School of Social Work, University Laval, Canada, and Scientific Director of the Center for Research on the adaptation of youth and families at risk (JEFAR). For 25 years she has conducted research on family transitions, in particular the difficulties experienced during separation, remarriage and stepfamilies, as well as the adjustment of adolescents living in stepfamilies. She has published several articles on these topics and presented many communications in Canada, Europe. and the US. She regularly provides training for practitioners working with blended families, and for several groups of parents coping with family blending. She is also regularly asked in the media to comment on the situation of these families.

Ágnes Sántha (PhD) is Assistant Lecturer in Social Sciences at the Sapientia Hungarian University of Transylvania, Romania. Her research areas are the sociology of the family, microsociology and social theory. Her PhD dissertation is a comparative analysis of the lifestyle single in Budapest, Hungary and Berlin, Germany, among educated urban youth, entitled ‘Lifestyle of singles in Budapest and Berlin’. She has also published a study at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, Institute of Political Sciences, on the work orientations and professional satisfaction of Hungarian and German youth.

Nicki Ward (PhD) is Lecturer in Social Work at the Institute of Applied Social Studies, University of Birmingham in the UK. Her teaching and research interests are focused broadly on issues of social justice and inclusion with a particular emphasis on issues of equality, diversity, empowerment and social identity, and care relationships. Alongside this, Ward is interested in qualitative research methods, particularly narrative methods, and the development of participatory research. She is currently conducting research on the needs and experiences of people with learning disabilities who are caregivers. Publications include (2009) ‘Social exclusion, social identity and social work: analysing social exclusion from a material discursive perspective’, Social Work Education, vol 28, no 3, pp 237–52.

Verónica Zubillaga (PhD) has a Doctorate in Sociology from the Université Catholique de Louvain in Belgium (2003). She is Professor and Researcher at the Universidad Simón Bolívar (USB) and at the Universidad Católica Andrés Bello (UCAB); she is also Associated Researcher at the Laboratorio de Ciencias Sociales (LACSO) in Caracas, Venezuela. Her research interests and writing include urban violence in Latin America, youth, masculinities and qualitative methods. Publications include “‘Gaining respect’: the logic of violence among young men in the barrios of Caracas’, in G.A. Jones and D. Rodgers (eds) Youth violence in Latin America: Gangs and juvenile justice in perspective (Palgrave Macmillan, 2009).