Contents

List of figures, tables and boxes iv
Acknowledgements v
Preface vi

1 Introduction 1
2 The built rural 25
3 The economic rural 47
4 The land-based rural 71
5 The social and cultural rural 97
6 Conclusions 123

References 140
Index 169
List of figures, tables and boxes

Figures
1.1 The 'rural idyll', England's 'green and pleasant land'? 2
2.1 Landscape near Kirkby Stephen, Upper Eden Valley 30
2.2 Community of Suodenniemi 37
2.3 Walbundrie Hotel and Pub, New South Wales 44
3.1 Røros and its surrounding mining and agricultural landscape 54
3.2 The distinctive wooden structures in Røros, along with its prominent masonry church 55
3.3 Røros in winter 56
3.4 Blue Ridge downtown's tourist economy – an example of bar/restaurant business 61
3.5 Workspace provision in Blue Ridge – serviced site with three tenants 64
4.1 An industrially cutaway bog 80
4.2 Example of a peat restoration project 81
4.3 Bord na Móna’s Mountlucas Wind Farm, including new amenity, walking tracks and trails for local community use 82
4.4 Topography of the Yangliu Watershed where the SLCP was implemented 87
4.5 New tree planting within the Yangliu Watershed 88
4.6 Restructuring the Aigas Forest from a commercial forest to a local amenity resource 93
4.7 Volunteers working at Aigas Community Forest 94
5.1 'For Lots of Lost Windows' (2006) by Akiko Utsumi (permanent installation) 108
5.2 'Tsumari in Bloom' (2003) by Yayoi Kusama (permanent installation) 109
5.3 'The Rice Fields' (2000) by Ilya and Emilia Kabakov (permanent installation) 110
5.4 Group of volunteers painting the first rainbow crosswalk in Mahone Bay, Lunenburg County, Nova Scotia at Pride 2020 117
5.5 Pride parade, Eskasoni First Nation, Nova Scotia (2019) 118

Tables
1.1 Developing place capitals 7
1.2 Emerging functions of the rural 19
1.3 The scope of rural planning 21
2.1 Smart possibilities for rural places 39
3.1 The new rural economy 48
6.1 Planning for the good countryside 128

Box
3.1 The Fannin County tourist product 62
Acknowledgements

We are indebted to the commissioning and production teams at Policy Press, whose support, guidance and encouragement were instrumental in turning our rough ideas into this more polished text. Emily Watt, Freya Trand, Angela Gage and Annie Rose deserve special mention. The book’s cover photo, ‘The Lure of the Land’, is by Joanne Coates and was taken in rural Northumberland in England. Selecting the right photo for a cover is never easy, but Joanne’s work focuses on how we perceive, present and think about rural places — and therefore aligns with the goals of this book. Rural Places and Planning was written during a global pandemic. We dispensed with the usual face-to-face gatherings, working on the book during lockdowns in relative isolation. While there were of course periodic meetings on Zoom, this has been an odd experience, but also an opportunity for reflection on the multi-faceted nature of rural planning research and on the great diversity that exists in rural places, which continue to provide a source of inspiration and learning for planning scholarship.

Although much of the research for this book has been secondary-source and online, sometimes referencing past projects, we are grateful to the many people around the world who answered emails and supplied us with images for our rural planning case studies. As such, we wish to thank Johanna Seppa, Suodenniemi-Seura; Dag Kittang, Norwegian University of Science and Technology, Trondheim; Jan Hackett, Fannin County Chamber of Commerce; Christie Gribble, Fannin County Development Authority; Jun He, Yunnan University; John Graham, Aigas Community Forest; Marcus Collier, Trinity College Dublin; Fram Kitagawa and Masahiro Sekiguchi, Art Front Gallery; Tadahiro Asai, Echigo-Tsumari Satoyama Collaborative Organisation; Shelley Rafuse, Lunenburg Pride; Muin Ji’j (Bertram Bernard Jr.), Pride Eskasoni; and also Adrian Favell, Nathaniel Lewis and Hironori Yagi. The many colleagues who share both our interest in rural places and also their insights during the symposia, workshops and conferences we attend during more ‘normal’ times also deserve our thanks.

Finally, the personal credits: Menelaos would like to dedicate this book to his parents, Leonidas and Vera. Nick’s gratitude goes to Manuela, Marta and Elena — a source of constant support, inspiration and purpose. Mark would like to thank Karen, Ada and Lucas for their love and support, and their patience during various lockdowns, and he would like to dedicate this book to his late parents, Moore and Myrtle.