GENDER REGIMES IN TRANSITION IN CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE

Gillian Pascall and Anna Kwak
Contents

List of tables and figures iv
Acknowledgements v

one  Introduction: gender and the family under communism and after 1 two  Gender regimes in Central and Eastern Europe 31 three  Policy and parents in Poland 69
four  Mothers and the state 99
five  Mothers and their households 119
six  Mothers and social policy 143
seven  Gender equality in the wider Europe 161
eight  Conclusion 183

References 195
Appendix: The sample 215
Index 217
List of tables and figures

Tables

2.1 Male and female employment rates, as a percentage of men and women aged 15-64, and the difference between male and female (2003) 40
2.2 Female and male unemployment rates, as a percentage of the labour force, and the difference between female and male (2004) 41
2.3 Gender pay gap in unadjusted form (2003) 42
2.4 Maternity, paternity and childcare leave entitlements and pre-primary enrolments (2001, 2002) 47
2.5 Number of working hours per week for men and women and the difference between men and women 56
2.6 Part-time workers as a percentage of total employment (2002) 57
2.7 Risk of poverty, as a percentage before and after transfers, female and male (2003) (or most recent available figures) 59
2.8 Women in decision making (%) 63

Figures

1.1 Real GDP growth 19
1.2 General government expenditure 20
1.3 Public expenditures on health 20
1.4 Public expenditures on education 21
1.5 Employment ratio 21
1.6 Distribution of earnings (Gini coefficient) 22
1.7 GDP per capita 23
1.8 Age-specific marriage rate 26
1.9 General divorce rate 26
1.10 Share of non-marital births 27
1.11 Abortion rate (per population) 28
2.1 Map of gender equality policies and models 36
2.2 Pre-primary education enrolment 49
2.3 Population, age 0-4 at the beginning of the year 49
2.4 Total fertility rate 52
7.1 Social Policy Agenda 165
We would like to thank the British Council and the Polish State Committee for Scientific Research who, through the Polish–British Partnership Programme, gave us a grant for travel in order to undertake the qualitative research for the study ‘Gender relations of care: parents and social policy in Poland’ on which we draw for this book. We also appreciate the support given to the project by the School of Sociology and Social Policy, University of Nottingham, UK. Now that our book is being published we would like to express how much we appreciate such help, which allowed us to translate our ideas into reality.

We also would like to thank Dorota Całka, Magdalena Leśniewicz-Bieńczyk, Iwona Skubis, Renata Bartosik, Anna Dyrała and Anna Górna for their part in the research.

We are particularly grateful to colleagues who have supported the study in a variety of ways, through their interest, through time given to commenting on proposals and drafts, and help with translation. Among these we would particularly like to thank: Robert Dingwall, Frances Camilleri, Jane Lewis, Andrzej Mościskier and Robert Pascall.