BIOGRAPHICAL METHODS AND PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE
An international perspective

Edited by Prue Chamberlayne, Joanna Bornat and Ursula Apitzsch
Contents

Notes on contributors v

one Introduction 1

Ursula Apitzsch, Joanna Bornat and Prue Chamberlayne

Part One: Putting the subject into policy and practice 17

two Biographical methods and social policy in European perspective 19

Prue Chamberlayne

three Balancing precarious work, entrepreneurship and a new gendered professionalism in migrant self-employment 39

Ursula Apitzsch

four Considerations on the biographical embeddedness of ethnic entrepreneurship 57

Maria Kontos

five Ethnic entrepreneurship as innovation 73

Feiwel Kupferberg

Part Two: Subjectivity in context 91

six The social subject in biographical interpretive methods: emotional, mute, creative, divided 93

Andrew Cooper

seven A socially and historically contextualised psychoanalytic perspective: Holocaust survival and suffering 101

Daniel Bar-On

eight Professional choices between private and state positions in Russia’s transformation 115

Victoria Semenova

nine Maintaining a sense of individual autonomy under conditions of constraint: a study of East German managers 131

Ulrike Nagel

Part Three: Self-awareness in research and practice 147

ten Biographical reflections on the problem of changing violent men 149

David Gadd

eleven The biographical turn in health studies 165

Wendy Rickard

twelve Ethical aspects of biographical interviewing and analysis 181

Kaja Kaźmierska

thirteen Ghost writers: using biographical methods across languages 193

Bogusia Temple
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Author(s)</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>fourteen</td>
<td>‘Bucking and kicking’: race, gender and embodied resistance in healthcare</td>
<td>Yasmin Gunaratnam</td>
<td>205</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>fifteen</td>
<td>Biography as empowering practice: lessons from research</td>
<td>Joanna Bornat and Jan Walmsley</td>
<td>221</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>sixteen</td>
<td>‘It's in the way that you use it’: biography as a tool in professional social work</td>
<td>Riitta Kylönен</td>
<td>237</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>seventeen</td>
<td>Interpreting the needs of homeless men: interviewing in context</td>
<td>Karin Schlükker</td>
<td>251</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Part Five: Biographical resources in education and training</td>
<td></td>
<td>263</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>eighteen</td>
<td>In quest of teachers’ professional identity: the life story as a methodological tool</td>
<td>Marie-Françoise Chanfrault-Duchet</td>
<td>265</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>nineteen</td>
<td>Narratives, community organisations and pedagogy</td>
<td>Rosemary Du Plessis, Jane Higgins and Belinda Mortlock</td>
<td>285</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>twenty</td>
<td>Doctors on an edge: a cultural psychology of learning and health</td>
<td>Linden West</td>
<td>299</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>twenty-one</td>
<td>Intercultural perspectives and professional practice in the university: what’s new in Germany</td>
<td>Lena Inowlocki, Maria Teresa Herrera Vivar and Felicia Herrschaft</td>
<td>313</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Index</td>
<td></td>
<td>331</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Notes on contributors

Ursula Apitzsch is full Professor of Political Science and Sociology at the J.W. Goethe University, Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany and member of the board of directors of the Frankfurt Centre for Women’s and Gender Studies. She was coordinator of the Targeted Socio-Economic Research project ‘Self-employment activities of women and minorities: their success or failure in relation to social citizenship policies’ (SEM), and now leads the European Commission Research and Technological Development project ‘The chances of the second generation in families of ethnic entrepreneurs: intergenerational and gender aspects of quality of life processes (ethnogeneration)’. Her publications include Migration und Traditionsbildung (Opladen, 1999), ‘Biographical analysis: a “German” school?’, with Lena Inowlocki, in Chamberlayne et al (eds) The turn to biographical methods in social science (Routledge, 2000), and a monograph for the International Review of Sociology, entitled ‘Self employment – gender – migration’ (2003).

Daniel Bar-On is Professor of Psychology at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, Beer Sheva, Israel. Born in 1938 in Haifa to parents of German descent, he worked for 25 years as farmer, educator and then secretary of the Kibbutz Revivim. He pioneered field research in Germany on the psychological and moral after-effects of the Holocaust on the children of the perpetrators. His book, Legacy of silence: Encounters with children of the Third Reich (Harvard University Press, 1989), has been translated into French, German, Japanese and Hebrew. He has brought together descendants of survivors and perpetrators for five intensive encounters (the To Reflect and Trust group, shown by the BBC on ‘TimeWatch’, October 1993), as well as students from the third generation of both sides. Another of his books, Fear and hope: Three generations of Holocaust survivors’ families (Harvard University Press, 1995), was published in Hebrew, English, German and Chinese, and he has since published The indescribable and the undiscussable (Central European University Press, 1999). He has been appointed to numerous professorial chairs and received top-ranking awards in the US, Germany and Italy. Together with Professor Sami Adwan, he directs the Peace Research Institute in the Middle East (PRIME).

Joanna Bornat is Professor of Oral History in the School of Health and Social Welfare at the Open University, where she writes courses on social care and ageing. She has a long-standing interest in oral history, reminiscence and remembering in late life and has researched and published articles, book chapters and edited collections in these areas. She has been joint editor of Oral History for over 20 years and is a founder member of the Centre for Ageing and Biographical Studies at the Open University.
Prue Chamberlayne taught for many years at the University of East London, where she was director of the Centre for Biography in Social Policy, and coordinator of the seven-country EU-funded SOSTRIS project (‘Social Strategies in Risk Society, 1996-99’). She has since been a Senior Research Fellow in the School of Health and Social Welfare at the Open University, where she has explored the use of biographical approaches in professional training (in the field of homelessness) and evaluation (in arts-based community development health work). Her publications include the jointly authored Cultures of care: Biographies of carers in Britain and the two Germanies (The Policy Press, 2000), and three jointly edited collections, Welfare and culture: Towards a new paradigm in social policy (Jessica Kingsley, 1999), The turn to biographical methods in social science: Comparative issues and examples (Routledge, 2000), and Biography and social exclusion in Europe: Experiences and life journeys (The Policy Press, 2000).

Marie-Françoise Chanfrault-Duchet is a Senior Lecturer in Language Sciences at the IUFM (School of Education) and at the University of Limoges (France). Her research fields concern biography from the viewpoint of linguistics, literature, education and feminist theory. She has published a book in German on ‘autofiction’, entitled Adolf Wülfli, autobiography and autofiction (Rombach Verlag, 1998) and numerous articles about life story as a genre. She is currently working on the linguistic construction of the self.

Rosemary Du Plessis is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Sociology and Anthropology at the University of Canterbury (New Zealand). She has supervised a large amount of undergraduate and postgraduate work that utilises biographical research strategies, including personal accounts of professional practice. Her current research includes analysis of public debates about fathering and the evaluation of strategies to facilitate public participation in decision making about the application of new biotechnologies.

David Gadd is a Lecturer in Criminology at Keele University, Staffordshire. His research interests include masculinities and crime, domestic and racist violence, psychosocial and psychoanalytic perspectives.

Yasmin Gunaratnam is a freelance researcher and writer who works on issues of race and gender equality in health and social care. She also has an interest in research methods and is author of Researching ‘race’ and ethnicity: Methods, knowledge and power (Sage Publications, 2003).

Maria Teresa Herrera Vivar studied sociology, politics and pedagogy at the J.W. Goethe University in Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. Her study focus concerns feminist theory, gender relations, migration and racism. She is currently writing her MA thesis on ‘Political organizing of immigrant women: between identity politics and multidimensional subjectivity’. She is a counsellor for foreign students at the students’ union (AStA)/J.W. Goethe University, and also works at the Women’s Association for Self-Defence in Frankfurt-am-Main.

Felicia Herrschaft studied philosophy, cultural anthropology, psychoanalysis and sociology at J.W. Goethe University in Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. She wrote her MA thesis on philosophy on Karl Mannheim’s sociology of knowledge: ‘Strange knowledge’. She is currently developing a PhD thesis on experimental spheres and conceptual art, based on her radio programmes with female artists in her public radio show in Frankfurt-am-Main, redaktion universal at Radio X.

Jane Higgins is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Sociology and Anthropology at the University of Canterbury (New Zealand). Her recent research has focused on a narrative approach to teaching sociology in a prison education programme, welfare reform in New Zealand during the 1990s and youth transitions from education to employment.

Lena Inowlocki is Acting Professor in the Department of Social Sciences at J.W. Goethe University in Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. Her work is mostly in the area of qualitative–interpretive social research, on families and adolescence and on issues of biography, right extremism, migration, culture and knowledge. Recent publications in English are: ‘Biographical analysis: a “German” school?’ (with Ursula Apitzsch) in Chamberlayne et al (eds) The turn to biographical methods in social science (Routledge, 2000) and ‘Doing “being Jewish”: constitution of “normality” in families of Jewish displaced persons in Germany’, in Breckner et al (eds) Biographies and the division of Europe: Experience, action and change on the ‘Eastern side’ (Ashgate, 2003).

Kaja Kaźmierska is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at the Institute of Sociology (Chair in Sociology of Culture) at the University of Lodz (Poland). Her research is based on biographical narrative interview analysis and she works on problems such as collective identity, collective memory, and biographical experiences of the war. She has published Polish war experiences and ethnic identity: Analysis of eastern borderland narratives (IfiS PAN, 1999) in Polish as well as numerous papers in Polish and some in English.
Maria Kontos has initiated and conducted several research projects on migration, migration policies, gender, biography and self-employment. She has worked on the EU project ‘Self-employment activities of women and minorities’ and has been a lecturer in the Sociology Department at the J.W. Goethe University in Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. More recently, she has been a researcher at the Institute of Social Research at the J.W. Goethe University, charged with the coordination of the EU project ‘The chances of the second generation in families of ethnic entrepreneurs’. She has published on migration, self-employment, self-employment policies, social work, gender and biographical methods.

Feiwel Kupferberg is Professor of Educational Sociology at the Danish University of Education in Copenhagen. He has been a visiting professor at the University of California at Berkeley, the Max Planck Institute of Human Development in Berlin, the Berlin-Brandenburg Institute of Social Research, Moscow University and the University of Wisconsin, Green Bay. He teaches in the fields of sociological theory and biographical methods. His most recent books have focused on creativity in an educational context, the professional socialisation of nurses in Denmark, the interplay of individual biographies and societal transformations in Eastern Europe, and the management of the past in postwar East Germany. He is currently working on several book projects within the emerging field of the sociology of creativity.

Riitta Kyllönen is a Researcher at the University of Tampere, Finland. She has done research in Italy for several years, in particular on the interrelationships between family, labour market and the welfare state. She has worked as a (visiting) researcher in the Universities of Modena, Padua, Turin and Urbino. Her doctoral research is a biographical study of how Italian parents reconcile work and family over their life course.

Belinda Mortlock has been awarded a MA in sociology, and has experience of teaching and administering courses in the School of Sociology and Anthropology, University of Canterbury, New Zealand. Currently she coordinates that university’s Social Science Research Centre, a multidisciplinary centre set up to facilitate a more collaborative approach to social science research within the university and the broader community. Her research interests include health, gender and the social analysis of life stories.

Ulrike Nagel is Associate Professor in Microsociology at Otto-von-Guericke University, Magdeburg. Her research interests and publications cover the interface between biography and the institutional life course, and her recent studies focus on pathways to modernisation in post-socialist countries undergoing transformation and in the world of work and professions. She has also published in the fields of qualitative research methods with special regard to the non-standardised expert interview and its foundation in the sociology of knowledge.

Wendy Rickard is a Senior Lecturer in Public Health and Health Promotion at London South Bank University, and specialises in teaching qualitative research methods to postgraduate students in the Faculty of Health. She works collaboratively with the National Sound Archive at the British Library, where she has led projects titled ‘HIV/AIDS testimonies’, ‘The oral history of prostitution’ and ‘Life history for health promotion’ (which includes life histories with homeless people, refugees and asylum seekers, and looked-after young people). She is currently working on an associated collection of oral histories with haemophiliacs living with HIV or AIDS.

Karin Schlücker studied psychology, sociology, political sciences and psychoanalysis in Bochum and Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. Since 1995 she has worked as a Research Assistant at J.W. Goethe University in Frankfurt-am-Main. She is researching for her doctoral thesis on epistemology and methods of qualitative text analysis in social sciences and is participating in a research project on curative interaction in psychoanalytic therapy.

Victoria Semenova is a Professor at the State Humanitarian University (Faculty of Sociology) and Principal Researcher at the Institute of Sociology, Russian Academy of Sciences. She is also a national expert for USAID and the UN Human Development Programme.

Bogusia Temple is a Reader at the Salford Housing and Urban Studies Unit at Salford University. She has an interest in methodological issues in research, particularly in relation to minority ethnic communities. She is currently working, with researchers at London South Bank University, on a Joseph Rowntree Foundation-funded research project looking at service users’ views of interpreters. She is also working on research with refugees and asylum seekers. She has published extensively on both general methodological issues and on issues in relation to minority ethnic communities.

Jan Walmsley is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Health and Social Welfare at the Open University. Her research interests are in the history of learning disability and participatory research methods. She is author of Inclusive research in learning disability: Past, present and futures (Jessica Kingsley, 2002) with Kelley Johnson.

Linden West is Reader in Education in the Centre for Educational Research at Canterbury Christ Church University College, Kent, UK. He uses biographical methods in his research and teaching including, most recently, in a new MA programme for guidance professionals. He is Convenor of the Life History and Biography Network of the European Society for Research on the Biographical methods and professional practice

Education of Adults (ESREA) and has worked for a number of universities, adult education organisations and as a broadcaster. He is a qualified psychoanalytic psychotherapist. He is the author of a number of books including Beyond fragments, adults, motivation and higher education: A biographical analysis (Taylor and Francis, 1996) and Doctors on the edge: General practitioners, health and learning in the inner-city (Free Association Books, 2001).